

Day of the AFRICAN CHILD

Want to help put on a fun event filled with the sights and sounds of Africa?

Harambee Centre invites you to get involved in our annual event, the Day of the African Child Saturday, June 19th 2010, in the South Park Blocks!

Day of the African Child is a celebration of the cultural diversity in all of us! It focuses on both the cultural variety and overall spirit of Africa. We are educating people through the celebration of music, dance, storytelling, food and an African Marketplace. It is a unique day when people from all cultures can come together.

Hear the call of the drums during a parade of flags with children from King School! Explore a bustling outdoor African Marketplace! In the Smith Memorial Student Union, discover the art of storytelling with award-winning book artist and storyteller, Baba Wagué Diakité! Learn to dance and create crafts through workshops designed for all ages!

The Day of the African Child is a day recognized throughout the world as an opportunity to reflect on progress toward health, education, equality and protection for all of the continent's children. This celebration focuses on both the cultural variety and overall spirit of Africa.

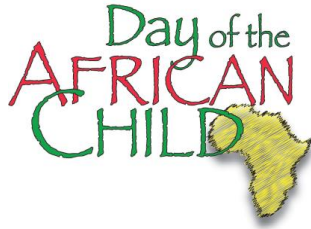

This year should be bigger and better than ever! We are working in partnership with the Portland Farmers Market and are supported by Portland State University's Multicultural Center and Association of African Students to connect the people of the Northwest to the people of Africa with this vibrant event.

Volunteers are needed to help with a variety of tasks including but not limited to:

- Set up and take down
- Promotion
- Facilitating workshops
- Face painting
- Supervising crafts and educational activities

This event would not be possible without the generous support of volunteers and there are many ways to get involved!
Come be part of the excitement volunteer at the Day of the African Child
